

Interxion renews SunTone Certification in all European data centres

Amsterdam, February 8, 2006 - Interxion, the leading provider of carrier-neutral data centre and managed services in Europe, today announced that it has successfully renewed its SunTone Certification in all its 20 European data centres for the fourth consecutive year.

The objective of the SunTone Service Excellence Model is to make continuous availability the norm for consumer and business networked services. For over five years, Sun Microsystems's SunTone program has focused on assessing, improving and certifying the quality of the human skills, practices and technologies that support delivery of mission-critical IT and business services. For service providers, the SunTone Certified logo remains the symbol of service delivery quality.

Interxion's SunTone certified service has once again been audited and has passed rigorous, industry-defined guidelines for quality, availability and security. The SunTone Certified status demonstrates Interxion's continued efforts to provide high quality services and differentiates Interxion service from the competition.

"The quality of service provided by an external service provider can determine the success or failure of any organization striving to grow, make a profit or serve the public. As data centres have firmly established themselves as an integral part of the mission-critical IT and business services, more and more customers are turning to Interxion as our commitment to quality and availability of services is well known and recognised," said Anthony Foy, Group Managing Director, Interxion.
